INDEX TO FAIRY TALES MYTHS AND LEGENDS

Once on a Time

"Once on a time" was a magical phrase,
Thrilling with promise of marvelous stories,
Tales of the pixies and nixies and fays,
Princes and fairyland kings in their glories;
I was a boy, and these chronicles, all of them
Bore me away in a mythical clime
Ruled by strange wizards, and I was in thrall of them
Once on a time!

Once on a time I was slender and young,
Love was enchantment and life was a dance,
Youth was but coin to be squandered and flung,
Days were all sunshine and nights were romance.
Now when I think of those days and the fun of them,
When I see youngsters still flush in their prime,
I can sigh, "Well, at the least I was one of them
Once on a time!"

Once on a time I had wonderful dreams,
Made up of rainbows that glowed in the distance;
Once I sought life, but today, so it seems,
All I have won to is merely existence.
This is the fruit of the blithe and the merry tales—
Middle-aged plodding through workaday grime—
Still, thank the Lord, I believed in the fairy tales
Once on a time!

INDEX TO FAIRY TALES, MYTHS AND LEGENDS

The increased use of the story hour in work with children and the ever-widening use of fables and myths in school work have shown the need of an index which would save time by indicating at a glance the source of an asked-for story. When eight out of ten versions of a myth are given in their respective books under different titles bearing little or no resemblance to the one sought for, when each new translator or compiler may give an entire set of new titles to old favorites, mechanical aid is necessary to save reason as well as time.

This index includes, besides fairy tales and fables, the stories from Greek and Norse mythology which seemed most likely to be called for, also hero stories and some modern stories like the "Leak in the dyke," which are not strictly fairy tale or legend but which are constantly asked for by teachers and story tellers. The mythology entries have been considerably extended for the second edition, and a special effort has been made to include folk stories of as many nationalities as possible; but, the variants of well known tales have been noted from the viewpoint of the story teller rather than of the student of folk lore.

Since inquiries for stories are mainly by title this is first of all a title index. When the same story appears under various titles, it is indexed under the best known or under the one that seemed most descriptive of the story, and references are made from all the other titles. The title as contained in each particular book, when differing from the one under which it is indexed, is given in parenthesis at the end of the entry. In the case of mythology and hero stories the titles have been inverted, or invented if necessary, in order to bring the entry under the name of the character. When a book contains a number of stories about the same person but bearing different titles, a general reference to the book is given; when two only, but not in direct sequence, the titles are given in parenthesis at the end of the entry.

The cross references from one story to another are intended to aid story tellers by suggesting similar stories in case the one wished for is not obtainable. The cross references from subjects—holidays, stars, flowers, etc.—are intended to aid in identifying stories when the inquirer has forgotten the title and asks for the story by subject or contents. During the years the index was in use in card form at the Wilmington Institute Free Library, there were many calls for stories to illustrate some point of ethics, geography or history. As this demand for stories by subject seems to be increasing and comes from many sources—speakers, community workers, teachers, and volunteer story tellers—an effort has been made to meet it in some degree by extension of the cross references; by the inclusion of some material not fairy tale or myth but adapted for special occasions; and by including a list of story tellers' books which contain classified stories and subject lists.

Since the different editions of Grimm, Andersen and Æsop vary so much, not only in the stories included but also in the titles given them, a number of editions were indexed giving as complete a collection as possible of the author's work in editions suitable for libraries. The edition as well as the variation of title, if there be any, is given in parenthesis at the end of the entry.

Where two editions of the same work, not exactly alike as to contents, are indexed, no note of the edition is made in the entry of titles which are in both editions; note of the edition is made only in the entry of those which are contained in one of the editions and not in the other. To distinguish editions the name of the editor, compiler, translator or publisher is used in parenthesis after the entry and preceding the variant title, if there be one; a publisher's name is followed by ed. for edition, as Burt ed., Warne ed.

Paging is not given, as editions differ in paging even when the contents are exactly the same. The use of the exact title which the story bears in any particular book, either as the main entry or in parenthesis at the end of the entry, makes it easier to locate the title in the table of contents of the book indexed; but it is unfortunate that so many otherwise up-to-date collections of children's stories still have the cumbersome unalphabeted table of contents instead of an index.

Authors' initials are not used in the second edition even when there are several of the same surname since full imprint is given in the list of books indexed.

Roman numerals are used for two purposes,—to distinguish different stories having the same titles, and to bring together stories on the same theme instead of referring from one to the other; for instance, Why the sea is salt. I, II, III, and IV instead of Why the sea is salt. See also Magic coffee mill; Quern at the bottom of the sea.

The star (*) is used to mark versions suitable for small children.

Prices have been given in the list of books indexed as an aid in estimating cost; but, it has not been possible in many cases to bring them up to date. Neither has it been possible to locate and examine new editions of all the books indexed in the first edition. Editions vary disconcertingly by leaving out old material and also by including new, so it has been thought well to leave the old imprint while adding a later one when known.

Grateful acknowledgment is made to members of the staff of The Wilmington Institute Free Library and friends who helped in the work of compiling and preparing for publication. Indeed without the help of the library it would have been as impossible to complete this index as the previous one.

The generosity of the various publishers in loaning books has done much to make this index possible and thanks are due them for their courtesy and kindness in response to requests.
